

November Pastor's Corner

The "Good News" of the Gospel of Jesus Christ gives us hope. It seems this recurring theme in the Gospels and throughout this journey of life we have as followers of the "Way," gives us strength for the journey. We have faith in things unseen and yet we believe and move forward. As I was surfing through songs on You Tube I came upon this song written by David Byrne and Brian Eno. These words are an expression of hope for our lives now and into eternity. I hope you will enjoy and contemplate them as I have.

"Saw the wanderin' eye, inside my heart
Shouts and battle cries, from every part
I can see those tears, everyone is true
When the door appears, I'll go right through, oh
I stand in liquid light, like everyone
I built my life with rhymes, to carry on
And it gives me hope, to see you there
The things I used to know, that one fine day
One fine day
In a small dark room - where I will wait
Face to face I find - I contemplate
Even though a man - is made of clay
Everything can change - that one fine-day
Then before my eyes, is standing still
I beheld it there, a city on a hill
I complete my tasks, one by one
I remove my masks when I am done
Then a piece of mind, fell over me
In these troubled times, I still can see
We can use the stars, to guide the way
It is not that far, the one fine day"

Blessings to all as we journey through this Holiday season we are entering.
